

Grumpy's Week in Review

June 27 - July 3, 2011

The week that was... Seven events in the summer's hottest and most humid days, but this is the Slammer Tour and as rookies springlakes and TwoPutt were informed {along with a couple of other rookies}, the tour plays on.

Events 70-76 were played, meaning that 21 people had a chance to be one of the three stars. Quick – who is the only one chosen twice this week? eQuinelle, Hammond, Falcon Ridge, Canadian, Marshes, Mountain Creek and Casselview played host to the Slammer Tour. HoundDog, MikeeeC, Digger, Mother, The Tin Man, Bowler, Designer, LongBall, G1 NAP and Bling brought our total to 191 Slammers who've played on the Tour so far this season.

What happened to the rankings this past week? The eyes are mostly on the top spot and, yes, once again there was movement. We started the week off the same way that we started the season with some guy named Ticklar as the #1. By the way, he is the answer to the little trivia question asked in the last paragraph. He took advantage of a certain clause and had his week all pre-registered for him. On Friday, for his first defence, I quote OC IronMaiden: "Ticklar becomes the second Slammer this year to defend the #1 rank." How did he do it? He beat three former #1s! The next day wasn't as good when the Chef came out cooking. Again I quote the other eloquent OC Chilly" "I guess only some of these guys are good, and today no one was gooder than Chef."

Burnsy (#6 eQuinelle) and Sunny (#13 Marshes) entered the eagle race bringing that total to seven this season. Nobody has two yet. Wasn't it at Whitetail earlier in the season where Malone was heard making the prediction that he was going to eagle all four par fives? And yes, there was a Mapper skin this past week – hole three at Mountain Creek = 18 bones.

Milestones: At Casselview, KidsClub becomes the 10th Slammer to play in his 250th event. Pepilepu was the 65th to play in his 50th event the day before at Marshes.

Stevie Ray's 550th win was against The Therapist at eQuinelle, just one event after his 550th loss – currently at 553-553. He was 4th to win that many and 2nd to lose them. He was also 4th to collect his 1,200th point at Casselview.

Also at eQuinelle on Tuesday, Smitty was the 10th to earn 700pts. (one day after Hacker was 9th). Burnsy handed TJ his 50th career loss also during the storm.

Ticklar's third straight bird on hole #15 at Casselview on Sunday had him take over the career lead from Chilly with his 527th birdie. To put that into perspective, Chef was the 5th to record his 250th two days before on the 15th at Falcon Ridge.

That was the same day when Burnsy gets his 50th birdie in only his 31st career event to become the 38th slammer to get that amount. Hole #13 @ Canadian.

Thank you Bookie. You do a great job!
